ADAPTATION OF INTERNATIONAL NORMS OF MILITARY LAW TO THE PECULIARITIES OF MODERN CONFLICTS: CHALLENGES AND PERSPECTIVES FOR UKRAINIAN PERSONNEL

Modern conflicts require significant adaptation from traditional wars, which poses serious challenges to our security and defense personnel. Adapting international rules of military law to new realities is crucial.

The flexibility and adaptability of these norms must be considered to address the hybrid nature of many conflicts. Ukrainian personnel must be fully prepared to conduct operations in a non-linear environment where hostile actions may combine military, cyber, information, and hybrid aspects.

Furthermore, it is imperative to develop and enhance mechanisms for the application of international law in conflicts taking place in uncontrolled territories. This necessitates the implementation of new approaches and mechanisms of interaction to ensure the protection of human rights, effective arms control, and the safeguarding of innocent civilians.

The adaptation of international norms will facilitate the development of innovations and the use of modern technologies in the security sector. Advanced tools such as artificial intelligence, cyber defense, and drones can effectively address the challenges faced by our military and security services. Their implementation will undoubtedly enhance our capabilities and ensure our continued success.

Ukraine's personnel, with their challenging and unpredictable jobs, are fully committed to protecting the national interest and are well-equipped to navigate these complex issues with confidence and expertise. Integrating international military law norms with the specifics of modern conflicts is crucial for ensuring peace and security in the region and the world.
